> The prospects for an early adjournment of Congress look less promising than for some time. The Democrats decided to insist that Congress remain in session until all the tariff bills sent over from the House and all that may be sent over were voted on.

A suggestion was made that the Demo crats might go to the country if they would pass two tariff bills and send them to the President, leaving the others for future action, provided President Taft vetoed the two, but this suggestion did not meet with favor. There was a general agreement that the tariff question would be the live issue of the Presidential campaign and that it would be necessary for the Democrats to make a record in this Congress.

Miss Bloodgood at Elevated Station Keeps Woman From Jumping Track

Miss Edith Bloodgood, ticket agent at the Marcy avenue station of the Broadway elevated railroad in Williamsburg. vesterday at daybreak had her attention called to the queer conduct of a woman on the station platform by a man who was waiting for a train. The ticket agent stepped out to the platform just as a train was coming into the station. The woman, who afterward said she was Mrs. Kate Green, 41 years old, of 107 Madison street, Manhattan, was about to throw herself in front of the train when Miss Bloodgood seized her and there was scuffle during which both fell. After Mrs. Green had struggled with several persons she escaped through the waiting ; room and reached the street.

Fifteen minutes later the same woman appeared on the opposite station and crossed a small footpath to the platform and will teach about a hundred little chil-where Miss Bloodgood was. T. who had run up from the street, again frustrated the woman's designs and with some of the train crew she was detained on the platform until Miss Bloodgood's alarm whistle brought Policeman Shepherd of the Clymer street station. Mrs. Green was very violent, and Shepherd after getting two more policemen summoned an ambulance from the Wilhiamsburg Hospital.

Dr. Strahl found the woman suffering from acute mania and took her to the hospital. When she was taken into the emergency ward she broke away from the attendants, ran through the main corridor, down a flight of stairs and into a court yard. She was put in a straitjacket and taken to the Kings County Hospital.
